FALL

Lay down your autumn leaves,
 And speak your tales of winter almost here,
 But speak with hope, and smile.
 Let me remember the dry-crackle leaves
 Dad raked into a heap, while I made myself scarce,
 And the naked pleasure in the scatter,
 As I fell into the pile, reckless as any other boy.
 Let me remember the color, the sound,
 The smell, the mild rebuke,
 So I can replay it all once more.
